5:00 The Four Stages of Core Erectile Dysfunction Problems that may affect men's sexuality and desire to have sex include the following: Welcome to Neurocore Imaging. Neurocore Imaging specializes in In Vivo Optical Imaging using the Cerebral Blood Volume (CBV) response to understand human brain functions that regulate mood balance and emotional behavior. We define our CBV measurement using a technique that could also be used for localizing sites of brain functions that regulate autonomic (involuntary) functions that help build and maintain homeostasis. We can tell you about your health, on-time and accurate, tracking your CBV and showing you what your body is doing [The "Actions" link above]. In Vivo Optical Imaging Systems from Neurocore Imaging generate 2-PhotonExcitation (2PE) - based emission signals that are cross-correlated against a stable laser light pattern to ensure accurate detection of the variations in the detected CBV signal. Based on the measured Volume of blood, we can tell you your body is doing something - something it normally does well, like keeping your blood pressure at a healthy level, or something it might want to do better like optimizing neurotransmission and neurotransmission-regulating control.
